Etsy Seasonal Sales Calendar

What sells in every month of the year -- and the deadline to list it by.

Etsy runs on occasions. Buyers don't shop randomly -- they shop for the wedding, the classroom, the holiday, the fresh start. The sellers who win a season are never the ones who list during it; they are the ones whose listings were already there, gathering clicks, favorites, and reviews, when the crowd arrived.

The rule: list 6-8 weeks before the peak. The "List by" column below is that deadline for each season -- the last date your seasonal listings should go live to be seasoned when demand spikes.

Keep an Evergreen Base Underneath

Seasonal spikes sit on top of products that sell all year: wedding templates (roughly March through October), baby shower games, birthday party printables, and classroom resources. Aim for about 60% evergreen and 40% seasonal listings, so a quiet seasonal month never takes your whole shop to zero -- and so every seasonal push sends new buyers into a shop that already looks alive.

The 6-8 week rule exists because Etsy search rewards listings that already have clicks, favorites, and reviews when demand spikes. A listing published the week of the holiday competes against veterans. Publish early, let it season, and be the veteran next year.
